For many businesses there are a range of environmental compliance and regulatory considerations to be made that may stem from government policy or legislation. Examples of these could be water restrictions, discharge fees or allocations, emissions reporting thresholds, energy feed-in tariffs or even legal considerations around marketing claims or competitive pricing. It is worth doing a quick scan of your business environment to see whether you have any particular mandatory compliance issues to consider above and beyond your commitment to improved sustainability. You can note these in the ISSUES table above for future reference.
